Diabetes alert

Many people have disease but don't know it, say health chiefs

By NEIL DOCKING

AROUND 200 people are diagnosed with diabetes every month in East Lancashire.

But health chiefs believe many more people may not know they have diabetes, or that their lifestyle could lead them to develop the condition.

They are now launching an awareness raising campain to encourgage people to vist their GPs if they develop symptoms.

Sue Warburton, a long term conditions commissioning manager for NHS East Lancashire, which commissions and provides services for people across Burnley, Hyndburn, Pendle, Ribble Valley and Rossendale, and NHS Blackburn with Darwen Teaching Care Trust Plus, said: "If left untreated, diabetes can lead to many other health problems.

"If you have diabetes, you are five times more likely to suffer heart disease or stroke than somebody who doesn't, your vision can be damaged, and you are more likely to suffer from kidney disease.

"It is so important that people recognise the signs of diabetes, such as excess weight, feeling thirsty, or urinating more often than usual.

"The sooner diabetes is diagnosed, the greater the chance of avoiding serious health issues."

Some people are at greater risk of developing diabetes than others, such as those who have a family history of the condition, or people who are overweight and physically inactive. It is also more common in people of Asian origin.

However, a big factor which increases the risk of developing diabetes is lifestyle.

Sue said: "In many cases, diabetes can be prevented by leading a healthy lifestyle. So a diet balanced diet rich in fruit and vegetables, and plenty of exercise can help you avoid diabetes in the future."

Awarded Taste Lancashire Highest Quality Award

British Curry Awards 2010

EXPERT: Walter Fisher in his familiar role, passing on his extensive knowledge of weaving and mill engines to visiting children at Bancroft Mill in Barnoldswick

Tribute to Walter mill engine 'guru'

TRIBUTES have been paid to a well-known engine aficionado who helped bring a historic cotton mill back to life.

Earby man Walter Fisher, a founder member of Bancroft Mill Engine Trust, has died at Airedale General Hospital, aged 92.

A fellow trust member paid tribute to Walter, describing him as a 'respected and well-known' guru on mill engines.

Bancroft Mill, in Gillians Lane, was the 13th and final mill to be built in Barnoldswick, in 1920.

The trust, which was formed in the late 1970s, worked to transform the mill from a dilapidated site with a number of demolished buildings into a museum with a fully functioning steam engine, which opened its doors to the public in April 1982.

Harry Moore, of the trust, said Walter supported the registered charity from its inception and was always on hand to advise other members on theoretical or practical questions relating to the running, maintenance or repair of mill engines.

He said: "Walter was a fourth generation specialist in this field and thoroughly familiar with Bancroft Mill and its engine when the mill was weaving. He had a family connection with the formation of Brown and Pickles, Millwrights, of Barnoldswick.

ATTRACTION: Bancroft Mill Engine

"Walter exercised skills related to mill engines and Millwrighting as his specialty on their behalf.

"Indeed, there was not a mill in the area where his expertise had not been used.

"Many managers of other businesses outside of textiles would take Walter's advice on engineering matters. His opinion was respected throughout the area.

"Walter was always willing to pass his accumulated knowledge on to others and the twice-yearly visits by some schools to Bancroft invariably brought Walter to the mill to teach about weaving in and steam."

Walter leaves a son, Andy, daughter-in-law Maggi, and two grandsons, who all live in Sydney, Australia. His wife died in 2008.

'Stop' call for work on outdoor centre

By NAZIA PARVEEN

Developers of a controversial outdoor activity centre in Simonstone have been advised to stop work due to road safety concerns.

The tree-top adventure course and a car park was approved by Ribble Valley Council in December despite hundreds of objections.

But council bosses have now advised for work at the woodland centre, in Dene Wood, off Trapp Lane, which will be similar to the Go Ape centre at Rivington, to be bought to a standstill.

The council's development team said it had 'advised' developers to stop work due to issues related to the entrance to the centre.

A meeting between planning officials and Simonstone parish councillors was held in the Higher Trapp Hotel on Thursday, when councillors raised concerns.

Read and Simonstone councillor, John Hill said there was deep concern about the centre.

He said: "The location of the entrance is extremely dangerous and we believe that the developers have not been following guidelines in the initial application. It is creating highways issues on a road which has become increasingly dangerous over the years."

Resident Graham Meloy said Trapp Lane had been renamed 'Death Trap Lane' by locals.

Burnley developer Outdoor Elements plans to create a seven-acre forest adventure course featuring a platform for abseiling, a Jacob's ladder, wooden structures with seating areas and shelters, an archery range and a climbing tower.

Jim Bowden, from the firm, said: "We have full planning permission and this has a number of conditions of which one is that we must achieve 100 metres vision from the entrance."

Right move for morris dancer

Actor Ian Hart can be seen in Morris: A Life with Bells (available to buy on DVD from July 26), a comedy following the fortunes of a morris dancing team. The Liverpudlian can also be seen in A Boy Called Dad, released on DVD on August 16.

60 SECONDS WITH ... IAN HART

WHAT ATTRACTED YOU TO MORRIS: A LIFE WITH BELLS ON?

The people involved really. The director Lucy [Akhurst] I'd worked with before on a thing about Beethoven called Eroica, and then I did a short film with Lucy – a little short she directed. So I was, you know, whatever she wanted me to do I'd have done it.

HOW WOULD YOU DESCRIBE YOUR CHARACTER, ENDEAVOUR?

He's just an old stickler for the rules and an enforcer of the rules – that's his job. Everybody needs an enforcer.

TELL US ABOUT LUCK, YOUR UPCOMING TV DRAMA WITH MICHAEL MANN AND DUSTIN HOFFMAN

I'm just waiting to see if it gets picked up or not. The main thing is the writer [David Milch] is the guy who wrote Deadwood. I think he's a great writer. Basically it's about life on a racetrack. Hoffman is the owner of one of the horses, and you've got Nick Nolte who's the trainer of a horse, and you've got a group of gamblers, jockeys, their agents.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO DIRECT ONE DAY?

I would like to direct but I wouldn't mind doing it in a way where people got paid, so I'm biding my time until the right set of circumstances.

SHOW: Paul Daniels is looking forward to Blackpool

By JEMMA HUMPHREYS

HE'S opinion-ated and outspoken, yet Paul Daniels remains one of Britain's most loved entertainers — anyone would think he had a magic wand.

At 72 he is one of the oldest showmen on the circuit, so you can't blame Paul for the occasional rant. He's had a lot of experience.

The magician offended Blackpool last year when he branded the town "scruffy" after a visit, but insists he is very much looking forward to returning for the Best Of British Variety Tour next month.

He said: "I love Blackpool. I just suggested after last time that they should be taking more care of the town to keep it clean. I've worked there so many times and, honestly, I love it. I just want it to be back to what it should be."

Paul will perform in the seaside resort for two nights in August, alongside The Krankies The Grumbleweeds and Syd Little, for an evening of entertainment harking back to the good old days — hosted by Christopher Biggins.

"It's the perfect show in the perfect theatre. Blackpool, after all is the home of British entertainment," added Paul, who shot to national fame with the launch in 1979 of The Paul Daniels Magic Show, which ran until 1994.

Considering he's been practising this craft for more than 60 years and touring his act for 41 years, it's little wonder he can still pull the crowds in at venues all over the world.

● BEST OF BRITISH VARIETY TOUR 2010 — Blackpool Opera House, August 13, and 20 and September 3. Tickets from 0844 856 1111.
